rather an unusual accident. Mrs. Essigman, in attempting to adjust a rubber laprobe to shield them from the rain, caught one of the straps in the steering gear, and before the car could be stopped the machine had run into a tree on the side of the road. The flying glass from the broken windshield cut all three occupants of the car about the face and head, the baby being cut so badly that it was found necessary to call a physi-cian to extract the bits of broken glass found embedded in its face. The car was towed to a garage.
